HOW TO PREPARE FOR A MARATHON

4.1. _____

Running shoes are the most important thing for marathon training. Choose professional running shoes from a well-known company. Also, get rid of all of your cotton running clothes. When you sweat, cotton stays wet, which can make you cold and uncomfortable during training.

4.2. _____

Plan your weekly runs as if they are important appointments. While life may get in the way of running every now and then, you should stick to your training program at least 80 percent of the time. Having a steady routine during your training will help protect you from getting injured.

4.3. _____

Don't try to limit the calories while you train for a marathon – you need calories to keep you strong for your running. Instead, choose healthy foods and snacks to fuel your body. If you exercise for more than 60 minutes you should consume 100 to 300 calories every hour.

4.4. _____

Marathon training can be very tiring, so be sure to give your body the regular rest it needs to keep up with the difficult training. Plan on getting an extra 30 to 60 minutes of sleep per day while you are training.

Hi John!

Guess what! I work at Sonic Drive-In. I make hamburgers. It's never super busy, because my town is small and no one's really crazy about Sonic here. The front people are nice and most of the managers are cool. I get free drinks and half price food. I get tips, too. Last night I got $21 in tips and I was working for less than 3 hours! It's nice because I always leave with some cash in my pocket between paydays.

And what about you? Do you have your first job yet?

Write to me soon,

AT THE RESTAURANT

Day 1 – Go, go, go! I got a chef's jacket and a black apron. I look almost like a professional chef! I tucked a towel into the apron straps and got started. The restaurant was organizing a special event, so everything had to be done faster than usual. There was so much to remember, so much to do. I didn't expect it! But I got my head down and did what I was told. I knew I was slow. New people always are. My back ached because I was bending and lifting and I felt a little like an old woman. But I was learning. And I hope that tomorrow will be better.

We were living in Oakbridge for about a week and I hated everything in it. When Mum said we were moving to the country from our flat in the city centre, I imagined a pretty, old-fashioned cottage with roses round the door. But the old unattractive house was dark with huge spiders, and cobwebs so thick it was almost impossible to see light through them.

'New house, new job, new beginning,' Mum kept saying, doing her best to sound optimistic. But the 'new beginning' was hard – at least for me. It was alright for Mum – she'd lived in Oakbridge before I was born so it wasn't really a new beginning for her, anyway.

'I still don't understand why we had to move here,' I complained, sitting down to lunch that first week – pizza again, served on a big cardboard box. We've had pizza every day since we arrived. Hot pizza for lunch, and cold leftover pizza for supper. I started to get sick of pizza.

Mum looked at me 'What do you mean, you don't understand? How many times do I have to explain?'

'I know, I know, it's a great job, and it'll be easier for you to drive to your workplace, but you were happy at your old job, weren't you? And what about me? What am I supposed to do without Laura? And what about my photography course? You know how much I loved going...'

'I'm really sorry, Becky. I know it's difficult for you, but I'm sure Laura will visit you later on in the summer, and there'll be a lot of chances for you to take photos around here. Jobs like this aren't offered very often, you know, not when you get to my age' my mum said.

We were so busy those first few days I didn't have much time to think about what I was going to do when Mum starts her great new job. It was the summer holidays. We weren't connected to the Internet yet, and I couldn't get a phone signal to call anyone.

We've been unpacking for over three hours today and I was just about ready to faint from heat when Mum's old friend, Stella, came to give us a helping hand. 'Tracy Miller, I can't believe you're back!' she cried, throwing her arms round Mum. 'It is so good to see you. And you must be the beautiful Becky!' She turned round to face me. I shook my head, blushing. No one had ever called me beautiful before. Neat brown hair, a turned-up nose and freckles don't exactly make me beautiful. Cute maybe – but not beautiful.
